Enrollment buldge to be followed by decline

By: KEVIN FARRELL

The UMR campus is crowded and enrollment is still going up. According to Joe Wollard, Executive Director of Administrative Services, we are using classroom space on the UMR campus in excess of 100% capacity. From an administrative point of view this is a financially attractive situation.

However, students see large lectures as being crowded, difficult and boring. The professor has no time for individual explanation and is often frustrated by the apparent lack of attention and enthusiasm.

Paul Ponder is the registrar here at UMR. Mr. Ponder says that enrollment fluctuations depend on several independent factors. He adds that even though enrollment has been increasing steadily for a few years it will soon level off and then decrease somewhat.

There are many factors that caused the enrollment to increase. One of these factors is the return of students to college. These are students who started college but weren't able to finish for some reason. This trend is still increasing.

Another increase in campus population is due to an increase in graduate school enrollment. For the first time in years, graduate school enrollment is increasing. This is due to the recognition in industry of the masters degree.

An unexpected increase in enrollment is caused by transfer students. There are 20% more transfer students this semester than there was last spring. A total of 600 students have transferred to UMR this fall. Many of these students have completed their first two years at another college. They continue at UMR in their junior year. This causes a population bulge at the junior level.

In this period of growth that has been occurring for the last three years there has never been as many people graduating as there are coming in. In a period of no growth there would be equal numbers entering and leaving. We are now headed for such a level condition.

There are a number of variables that will tend to decrease the enrollment. The most significant of these variables is the shortage of people graduating from high school. There simply aren't as many people graduating from high school as in the past few years.

The Missouri budget situation will also play a part in reducing enrollment. State support for UMR is 10% less than last year. In addition enrollment is up 14% from last year and inflation is about 10%. This makes it difficult for the University to keep the professors it has without raising the tuition. Raising the tuition will make it impossible for some students to attend UMR.

Raising the tuition will make it especially difficult for those who are applying for Federal grants and loans. As these programs are cut, many students will find themselves without the funds for college.

Mr. Ponder states the poor employment could cause a decrease in enrollment. This is not likely in the engineering and science field, at least not in the foreseeable future. Mr. Ponder does say that all things considered, the best guess we can make is that the rate of enrollment will level off in the next year or two and it may even decline a bit. He adds that no one can say for sure.

United Fund misses goal

By: ELLEN HENDRICKS

The Campus United Fund Drive, running through November fell short of the goal but still collected a large sum of money for the Rolla Area United Fund. So far, $13,717 has been collected with expectations exceeding $14,000. While most of the contributions came from UMR faculty and employees, some student organizations deserve special mention, namely the Photo Club, Karate Club, Panhellenic Board and Pi Kappa Alpha, who with extra effort, collected $614.59.

Every donation, from $1 to $500, goes to the United Fund. No administrative costs are taken out of collected money.

The Rolla Area United Fund's goal this year is $60,500. Among the many organizations which benefit from a United Fund donation are: American Red Cross, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Boy and Girl Scouts, Phelps County Humane Association and the Salvation Army.

General Motors Research completes $150000 pledge

Dr. Thomas A. Flaim, member of the staff of the General Motors Research Laboratories, Warren, Mich., presented a check for $30,000 Monday (Nov. 2) as the final payment on a five-year pledge of $150,000 support for the University of Missouri-Rolla.

Dr. Tomlinson Fort Jr., Provost, accepted the check for UMR.

UMR is one of 42 colleges and universities receiving financial support from the General Motors Foundation during the past five years as part of general Motors' Key Institution Program.

"The General Motors corporate body recognizes that there will be less governmental support for higher education in the future, and that industry will be called upon to increase its financial contributions to colleges and universities to insure the supply of highly qualified technical and scientific personnel," Flaim said. "A future financial commitment to UMR will come as a result of a proposal to be submitted by the University, and recommendations by the eight-member GM Key Institution Team."

Flaim received his B.S. degree in physics from UMR in 1968 and M.S. and Ph. D. degrees in ceramic engineering from UMR in 1970 and 1971.

Uniforms were worn on campus by military active and non-active military personnel in honor of Veterans Day Wednesday, Nov. 11.

John Biggs returns

SUBMITTED BY SUB

SUB will be presenting John Biggs, singer-guitarist, in a coffee house performance, Friday night, November 20, at 8:00 p.m. John, who has played here before, has been performing full time for the past five years. His talents have successfully carried him all over the United States and to western Europe.

John's act centers on folk, contemporary folk, country and bluegrass music. He says he "stole some of it...and wrote the rest."

He is an accomplished guitarist, playing both the six and twelve string flat tops as well as playing a pretty fair five string banjo — but his first love is singing, and in that respect he is gifted with a strong, clear, yet warm voice. Although usually doing the entire show himself, John has toured with over twenty different recording artists...including John Hartford, Waylon Jennings, Vassar Clements, Michael Murphy, Dave Loggins, and the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band.

As his many...many return engagements and favorable reviews indicate — whether in club, coffeehouse, or concert — John Biggs is an entertainer very much on the side of an enjoyable evening. The performance will be held in Centennial Hall and soda and popcorn will be available for 10¢ each.

Roger Durrett will star as Samuel Clemens this Friday night at 8 p.m. at the Cedar Street Center. The show, "An Evening With Mark Twain" is sponsored by the SUB fine arts committee. The show is free to UMR students.

Night At The Fights a success

SUBMITTED BY LAMBDA CHI

Lambda Chi Alpha's third annual "Night at the Fights" was held on Friday, October 30th. The proceeds from this year's tournament are being donated to the Gingerbread House. The Gingerbread House is a home for severely handicapped children where a trained staff can carry out the rehabilitation plans for each child in an affectionate, home-like atmosphere.

This year's "Night at the Fights" offered nine boxing matches. Each match proved to be an exciting contest. Congratulations are in order for winners Brian Kitt, Stan Barnes, Eugene Mitchell, Artie Wells, Ed Walden, Gary Beck, Kevin Isom, Leslie Buchanan, Rob Fecho, and for Mike Todd, this year's fighter of the night.

Lambda Chi has sponsored the "fights" for the last three years. The hours spent recruiting boxers, organizing practice sessions, and making arrangements for the event by the members of Lambda Chi have helped many local charities.

The proceeds from this year's tournament will help meet the construction costs of the Gingerbread House, which will aid children from the 15 surrounding counties.

Successful reasoning

Dr. Sparks to lecture on inventiveness

SOURCE: OPI

Dr. Robert E. Sparks, Washington University professor of chemical engineering, will speak on "Inventive Reasoning: Learning to be Inventive" at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 18 in the University of Missouri-Rolla University Center, Centennial Hall. The public is invited. There is no admission charge.

The lecture is an arts and sciences continuing education activity of UMR psychology. According to Martha Fort, arts and sciences continuing education coordinator, "This lecture may change the way you learn or the way you teach." She said that Sparks will examine subjects such as the inventing experience, how a learning experience can be organized to stimulate flexibility in thinking, how to reduce time spent waiting for ideas to happen, and how inventive reasoning is acquired and taught.

He will also give a seminar on the biological-chemical transport process at 4 p.m. Nov. 19 in Chemical Engineering Room 140.

Sparks has been on the Washington University faculty since 1972 and has served as director of the biological transport laboratory and as chairman of the biomedical engineering program there. He has also been professor of chemical engineering at Case Western Reserve University and research engineer with Esso Research and Engineering Company.

Miner of the Month awarded

SUBMITTED
By BLUE KEY

Roger White, a candidate from Thomas Jefferson Hall Association, has been named Blue Key Miner of the Month for the Month of October, 1981. Roger, a resident of 6th floor T.J., was the chief coordinator and administrator for T.J.H.A.'s haunted house that raised $780.00 for the Cerebral Palsy Foundation. Roger's efforts in motivating a residence hall to take on a service project of this scale were thought to be unparalleled in recent UMR history. Our most sincere thanks and congratulations go out to Roger and we look forward to more projects of this nature.

Roger will be awarded the certificate of recognition as Blue Key Miner of the Month and his name will be added to the plaque (located in University Center West lobby) which honors all previous recipients of this honor as well.

Social Security Mess

Must be someway out of here

By DR. GEORGES. BENSON
President
NATIONAL EDUCATION PROGRAM

Perhaps there is no way in America today to stir up people's emotions more quickly than to mention Social Security. So powerful are the emotions evoked by the subject that most commentators steer away from it like the plague. Yet

Social Security is a vitally important issue to many people but about which there is great misunderstanding. To duck the issue because of its controversial nature is to court more serious problems on downstream.

We really need to understand the facts in the matter in order to know which course of action we should ask our representatives to pursue. Most people understand very little about the system itself and consequently are ill-prepared to understand the problem.

The Social Security System was established by Act of Congress in 1935 and went into effect in 1937. It was designed to supplement a person's retirement income, not be his retirement income. Unfortunately, millions of Americans have come to rely on Social Security as their only means of support in old-age, hence the fierce emotionalism concerning the program. But this very fact points up the necessity of working to solve the problems in the system.

There are two types of problems: short-range and long-range. The short-range involves fear of "bankruptcy" of the Old-Age and Survivors trust fund about November, 1982. The long-range problem involves the generation gap.

When Social Security was established there was an average of sixteen people paying taxes to support one

Money

Application Fees

The following is an update on an article run on the front page of the Sept. 3 issue of The Miner. It is in response to a question of validity of the information concerning the fee requirements reported in the OPI release.

By DAVE GRIESE

As of August 1, 1981, an application charge of $20 for Missouri residents and $40 for non-residents was made mandatory at UMR. The charge is to be on all new applications.

The charge is refundable should the applicant decide to attend UMR. The money would go into other fees charged to the enrolling student. However, should the applicant elect not to attend, the charge would be forfeited.

According to Dr. Tomlinson Fort, Provost, the charge is in reaction to University budget cuts. "We get a tremendous number of applicants (that) take a tremendous amount of people time," he said.

He concluded by saying that the money goes to paying postage for correspondence with the applicants and toward the salaries of those people who process the applications.

Let's complain

By M. DEAN ANGOVE

I rarely like to violate the usually rigid journalistic attitude of keeping the first person out of stories that are to be published. But in this particular instance, I truly believe that it is about time someone spoke out about this major public hazard.

I will be the first to admit that I happen to be an "out-of-stater" who has done a considerable amount of travel. And also, while I would hesitate to claim that I am among the 'perfect' drivers on the road, I will not shy away from a claim to saying that I am among the better drivers in the city of Rolla.

Now you ask, "Where does this guy get the nerve to say that?"

Well, to answer that question, I will take to the road in this story, and "drive" the reader through one short pass...a typical one...through Rolla. I will mention perhaps types of automobiles, but those are only necessary to emphasize the journey.

We pull into a main thoroughfare by turning right by a gas station. Glancing over your left shoulder not a car is within two city blocks when you look...

...But five seconds later, a yellow, well-beaten sedan hastily begins breathing heavy on your rear end. The driver, obviously impatient, rips out from behind you (without signaling, I should add) and breaks into a burst of speed to blur past your car and pull in front of you, narrowly shading your front bumper...

...And then, without fail, slows down to fifteen, or twenty and pokes along at such a speed as to race snails.

It isn't rare for cars while on a negative sloping road to not have to step on the brake pedal to be sufficiently slow when approaching a controlled intersection. While this may reduce wear on brake drums, it is a road hazard.

Personally, I do not view the "problem drivers" of Rolla as a collective group who are unskilled in the

Why not diet?

By KAREN NICKEL

For some reason, I have heard more people than usual either casually mention or vehemently swear that they just must go on a diet, today. After a few moments thought, the start of the diet begins tomorrow morning. But that is self-defeating because when tomorrow morning comes, it is today and you promised that tomorrow morning you would start the diet. This is what you call an infinite loop. An ever-widening infinite loop.

As I sit here munching on my Fritos, I will give all you potential dieters a few helpful hints on imaginative but not necessarily effective diets.

First, a diet that you might not think so imaginative. Just don't eat. If you don't think this is imaginative try it for two days. You will be surprised with some of the wild things you think. Your yellow pencil suddenly looks like a banana and you begin to peel it. Not until the splinters embed themselves under your fingernails do you realize the middle of your banana is black not white. Actually this may be a bit drastic for some of you. Cold turkey is the hardest, but if you don't know when to stop, it may be best. (Don't go this route until somebody mistakes you for a school bus on the day you wear yellow sweats.)

Then you have all your fad diets. The high protein, the low protein, the no-fat-no-sugar, the all fruit and vegetable, ad infinitum, ad nauseum. I have come up with a few of my own. First, the isolation diet. It consists of bread and water for 5-10 days. If the thought of bread

Aloneness is priceless

By: HELEN BIRDSTEIN

Loneliness: feeling oneself alone and longing for company or friends. Aloneness: apart from other persons or things; solitary. Most people think of these two words as being synonyms. In many cases, they are. However, many people living in the dorms often crave aloneness, not loneliness.

Loneliness is very often felt when the student first arrives at this school. He doesn't know many people, if any, and spends much of his time waiting in his dorm room waiting for somebody to come looking for him. Eventually, of course, he will make friends. Then he spends much, if not all, of his free time with them.

His time is now spent in class, eating, sleeping, studying, and being with his friends (not necessarily in that order). Through all this activity the student has failed to allow for time to be by himself. He starts wishing that he hadn't promised to study with a friend, that he didn't have to help at the party that night, that he could be in his room for more than 15 minutes without his roommate walking in. (No offense intended roommate!)

Of course, there are several remedies to this malady. If you are blessed with having an automobile, it is possible to get in your car, drive just a couple miles out of town, and park on a lonely road somewhere just to sit by yourself and think.

If you are not so lucky, you can always walk to one of the nearby parks. This can be a little dangerous if you take this hike late in the evening, or if you happen to be a female. But, if you get to the point that you need to be alone, this rarely enters into your mind.

If none of this helps, no need to worry, it's only a few more weeks till the end of the semester when you can go back home and be surrounded by all your old friends and your family.

Letter from home

Dir Sers:

I'm sorry Everett missed class tomorrow. He really wanted to come but due to circumstances beyond his control he is in another dimension. You see I had just finished my everyday breakfast of chocolate milktoast with worcestershire sauce (recipe available upon request). I was reaching for my brown bag (the same one I have used since I was in seventh grade and has every date since then scribbled on it) lunch (pickle and peanut butter on rye with a warm Busch beer (now a dime more)) from the refrigerator, when a booming voice said "This isn't your day." I just thought it was one of my pet slugs digesting a neighborhood toy poodle and slid under the door to school. Well, next thing you know, I'm not on my block at all but in some big creepy building with dead (geez, I hope) people wrapped in bandages. They're all kind of set up in big glass cases like the braunschweiger, bologna and Swiss cheese at Mr. Myer's Deli used to be before I got my first tennis shoes. And if you think that's weird — they even have old dead birds and pigs and cats — echhh! Now a thing like this can really build up an appetite so I started munching down on my pickle and peanut butter on rye. All of a sudden this big claw rips it out of my hands. Now I'd messed up — this is where that thing-that-lives-in-my-closet-at-night goes during the day. These bodies are the ones that didn't pull the covers tight enough over their heads, geez! All I could think about was how I hadn't kissed my dad goodbye that morning.

(I'll never step on a n o t h e r c r a c k o r - drinkgrainalcoholtillmyeyesigoutagain!) Then, talk about a rapid transition, it was all gone. No more hairy monsters but also no more sandwich or beer. I was mad. Now I'm in this dim lit psychedelic opium den. There's bodies here, too, but I think they're alive — just passed out. Hey, great

Scooter P.I.

"Enters the Pit"

SOURCE: SPI

As we last left our hapless hero he and his trusted assistant were standing at the second floor window of Fred's State Bank awaiting G.B., the renowned helicopter pilot, so they could search the bank roof, the same bank which only minutes earlier had been the scene of a devastating murder.

"He's coming awful close to the building, Scooter," stated Doc.

"Don't worry Doc, G.B. is the best pilot I know," Scooter replied.

"He's the only pilot you know!" Doc said as he pointed toward the oncoming helicopter. "He's gonna hit the bank," Doc shouted.

Scooter and Doc hit the floor of the bank president's office as G.B.'s helicopter tilted back to stop, too closely to the building, allowing the blade to dislodge the 'F' from the Fred's State Bank sign.

Scooter jumped up and hollered out the window "Hey G.B., drop the rope ladder down, I gotta check the roof."

"Will do Scooter," G.B. yelled back as he threw down the rope ladder. He then positioned the helicopter above the bank so the ladder was outside the window.

"Your not gonna go out there are you Scooter?" Doc asked, concern in his voice.

"I'll be alright, besides, this is the fastest way to the roof and I'll be able to make an aerial search while I'm up there," Scooter answered as he grabbed the rope ladder.

Immediately G.B. swerved the helicopter away from the building, sending Scooter careening toward structures on the opposite side of the street, then banked the helicopter sharply, just before Scooter collided, flying to rest just above the bank's roof. He then deposited Scooter on the roof and landed several feet from our favorite do-gooder.

"Nice flying, huh Scooter?" G.B. asked. When Scooter didn't reply he said, "Hey Scooter, you can let go of the rope now!"

Scooter opened his eyes and nimbly jumped to his feet. "Been playin' Galaxian again, G.B.?" Scooter snarled.

"Hey, your lucky I found this place. You said Fred's State Bank, not Red's State Bank," G.B. argued.

"Your crazy, it..." Scooter stopped as he realized the sign he was about to motion to actually did say Red's. "Maybe that wasn't Julie," Scooter mumbled to himself.

"Whatcha talkin' about Scooter?" G.B. queried.

"Huh, oh nuthin'," Scooter said as he quickly dispelled the thought and turned to the business at hand. "I need to make a search of the rooftop."

Scooter quickly left G.B. and made his way to the open trap door in the middle of the roof. He then scanned around and ran to the back of the roof. Just then Doc appeared from the trap door.

"Hey Doc, what the hell's goin' on here anyway?" G.B. asked.

"Me an' the Scoots are inspectin' the murder of the bank president," replied Doc.

"Ol' Red's dead, huh?" responded G.B.

"It's Fred, not Red!" Scooter yelled as he walked up to his pals.

"Fred, Smed, who cares? Find out anything Scooter?" asked G.B.

"Yeah, our gunman came out this way alright. It looks like a professional job. He climbed up the fire escape and made it to the roof by a rope I found over there," Scooter said as he motioned the back end of the roof. "If only we had more to go on."

"Oh yeah, I found this on the stairwell on my way up here," Doc volunteered as he held forth a .44 Magnum.

"Put that away Doc, somebody could get shot," Scooter warned.

"Hey, maybe that's the murder weapon!" quipped G.B.

"Wait, I got an idea," Scooter said as Doc and G.B. looked at each other and shook their heads. "That's the Murder Weapon!"

"Wow Scooter how do you do it?" G.B. and Doc said in unison.

"Deductive reasoning, what else?" Scooter replied.

Scooter knew there would be no fingerprints on the gun, the rest of the murder was too well planned. The gun would lead him to this man, though. He had to go see the only man in Rolla who dealt in guns, the same man who was responsible for much of the other illegal vices of city.

"Gentlemen, it's time to go see the Mole!"

Scooter sped away from the bank with much on his mind. He knew Julie would be safe. When the inspector finished questioning her she had left for his own office with Doc and G.B. in the helicopter. Now he had to see the Mole. It was the only way though, and he knew it. Only the Mole would be able to tell him who had bought the gun, but why would he? Scooter knew he would have to think of a great plan. He pulled over at the front of a liquor store, got out and went in to buy eight cases of beer.

Scooter pulled his Ferrari up in front of the Pit. Some people still called it the basement, but most now just referred to it as the Pit. The Mole would be here. This is where he ran his underworld.

Scooter carried the beer up to the door and knocked. A bearded man appeared at the door.

"Whatcha want?" the man asked.

"Good day sir, I'm doing a survey for a popular brand," Scooter replied.

"So what," the man countered.

"I got lots of free stuff for you to try," returned Scooter.

"So what," the man again said.

"It's beer," Scooter barely got that out when the man burst open the door.

"Well why the hell didn't you say so," the man said as he grabbed four cases and headed down the stairs.

Scooter regained his senses and picked up the rest of the beer and followed the man. Now if only the Mole didn't see through his disguise.

As he walked down the stairs he realized from the smell why this was referred to as the Pit. Scooter heard the man at the bottom of the stairs say, "Some idiot outside is givin' away free beer!"

Scooter entered the pit. There were three men there. The bearded man he met at the door, another man with a funny green jacket on, and the Mole. They all were engrossed in Scooter's samples.

"Help yourself gentlemen,

I got lots here." Scooter said smiling.

After Scooter had been there an hour he began wondering if he had brought enough beer. There was less than a case left and the trio was still drinking heavily.

"Pretty good stuff, huh Unc?" The man with the green jacket said.

"Yeah, I'm about ready for a binge," Unc, the bearded man, said as he reached down and picked up a bat.

The jacketed man got up, screamed "Binge time," and ran his head through a door.

Only the Mole remained calm. The others ran out of the pit and up the stairs, apparently to ravage all of Rolla.

Suddenly Mole spoke. "What do want here, Scooter P.I.?"

Scooter felt an icy tingle go up his back, and he knew it wasn't from the beer Unc had spilled on his way out. "How did you know it was me?" he asked.

"Who else would wear a stupid chicken hat like that," stated the Mole.

and water really makes you sick you can substitute beer and chocolate cake for two out of five days. There is also the late night study diet of popcorn, peanut butter and jelly sandwiches, kool-aid (or lemonade) and M&Ms. These aren't too balanced so vitamins are a must. If vitamins are the only thing you forget to eat then maybe the guru diet is for you. Nuts (the more exotic the better, try macadamia and brazil nuts), Chinese cabbage and snow peas, mangoes, bread fruit and kiwi fruit. If you haven't heard of any of these foods, don't despair, neither has half of the world. You have to stand on your head and meditate for four hours to make the diet effective anyway.

There are also diets to change your image too, not just your outward dimensions. To be more sophisticated try champagne, caviar, and Ritz crackers. It is always the Ritz that gives this diet that "touch of class". For that down home feeling, try such things as pinto beans, black-eyed peas, cornbread, butter milk and peach cobbler. This diet, though, could be hazardous to your accent. You may pick up a Georgian drawl or Arkansas twang.

What I like best are the ingenious devices that people think of to stop them from eating. One of the best is the mouse trap in the cookie jar. The results are quite effective. Not only does it stop you from eating cookies but it puts one whole hand out of commission for a few days. Another winner is the boxing glove in the freezer. This takes a little longer to set up than the mousetrap but it is worth it if you are addicted to that twelve midnight bowl of chocolate fudge marble ripple ice cream. The impact of the glove also helps you to fall asleep real quick. Then there is the alarm connected from your refrigerator to the endangered species foundation. When you open the door an alarm rings and soon after the little men in white jackets arrest you for depleting the amount of food in your icebox. (A vivid imagination and some very helpful but wacky friends helps the effectiveness of this one.) Some people use posters as deterrents. If you use this route pick something that turns your stomach, such as blood and guts or a picture of your calculus teacher. Fat bot-tomed ladies and exclamation points don't do the job.

Now that you have a few pointers maybe your diet will be more interesting and not so logical. And remember, today is the day and yesterday was the day you said tomorrow morning I will start my diet.

Damn, Scooter thought to himself, he thought this was a good disguise. Suddenly Scooter felt a new bravery in himself. Mostly because Mole had just gotten up and was stumbling all over the room.

Scooter pulled out the .44 magnum and said, "I want to know who bought this."

Mole looked it over carefully. Then he smiled. "There's only one reason I'll tell you, and its not cause I'm lit up. I've got a personal stake in this, the man who bought that gun, a hitman, has a long scar on his forehead." Mole babbled. "His name is..." Mole fell forward, passing out at Scooter's feet.

He didn't need to finish though. Scooter knew who this man was: Scarface Joe! Next week: Assassin Ambush.

But in an attempt to not be too callous in my judgments, I will make a few suggestions.

Second, a speed limit is there to tell you that a state inspected vehicle can safely travel at the speed indicated provided that the driver is wary of others while he or she proceeds from one point on to another. beneficiary. Currently, three people pay taxes to support one, and by the year 2000, in less than 20 years, there will be only two workers for each beneficiary.

Social Security has in effect been a "chain letter scheme," in which for forty years we send in our "contributions" and put our name at the bottom of the list in the hope that when our name reaches the top, at age 65, our pay-off will begin. Quite frankly the scheme has finally caught up with us.

Also, there is considerable concern that in twenty years the two workers who will be required to support the one single beneficiary may rebel at the heavy load required. Obviously, revisions are called for immediately.

Those concerned about the impending financial insolvency of the Social Security program, this forum included, are not hard-hearted individuals with no concern for the elderly and other dependents. It is a matter of how best to care for the needy and at the same time keep Social Security from going broke, and leaving them with nothing.

Most of the problems of Social Security have been generated by including within the retirement system beneficiaries by whom contributions were never made and at the same time awarding benefits far out of proportion to contributions. In other words, the system has been endangered by including other welfare features with the paid-for retirement program.

Demagogic politicians and media representatives have, for partisan political purposes, played on the fears of older Americans in opposing President Reagan's initial proposals to remedy Social Security shortcomings, implying that needed revisions would really "destroy the Social Security System." Nothing could be further from the truth. Failure to do anything will certainly destroy the system.

SEMO stops Miners' title hopes

SOURCE: OPI

The dreams of a second consecutive MIAA football crown ended for the University of Missouri-Rolla Saturday, as the Miners lost a 17-14 heartbreaker to Southeast Missouri State.

UMR's loss, coupled with Northeast Missouri State's 62-24 victory over Lincoln University, gave the 1981 conference title to the Bulldogs.

A Miner victory over the Indians would have set up a title-deciding game between UMR and Northeast Missouri this Saturday at UMR's stadium. Instead, the 1:30 p.m. game will be a matter of pride for the Miners.

"We'll give Northeast our best shot," UMR Head Coach Charlie Finley said. It's always disappointing when you don't win, but I'm sure our kids want to go out on a winning note."

A victory over the Bulldogs would give the Miners a 6-3-1 overall record and a 3-1-1 mark in conference play.

"We've had quite a few injuries this season, and it is a tribute to our kids that they stayed alive in the conference race this deep into the season," Finley said.

UMR struck early last Saturday, picking up a Southeast fumble on the game's first play. Brian Paris scored from one yard out six plays later.

The Indians, however, countered with a touchdown later in the quarter and went in front to stay when Joe Young hit Tom Rumping with a 78-yard touchdown pass with 12:45 left in the first half.

Southeast kicker Ed Hotz chipped in with a 26-yard field goal that proved to be the winning margin before the Miners mounted one last scoring drive late in the second quarter.

The Miners took possession with under two minutes to play and scored eight plays later when Dennis Pirkle hit Jim Gambill with a 26-yard pass with 19 seconds left.

Neither team scored in the second half, although the Miners came within three yards of regaining the lead in the fourth quarter.

UMR moved the ball to Southeast's three-yard line in the fourth quarter before a fumble stopped the drive.

The Miners had two more possessions late in the contest but couldn't get into Indian territory.

Paris was the game's leading rusher, gaining 51 yards on 20 carries. Pirkle hit on 15 of 27 passes, had two balls intercepted and tallied 187 yards in the air.

On defense, safety Scott Teter paced the Miners, piling up 11 solo tackles, intercepting one pass and recovering a fumble.

B-ball here Tuesday

The Miner Women's Basketball season will get off to an exciting start this Tuesday, November 17, when the Lady Miners meet one of their toughest opponents, Southwest Missouri State University, here at UMR.

The team will open the season with 7 of its 13 members having previously played for the Miners. They are: Carmen Baker, Laurie Behm, Leslie Behm, Gail Halsey, Linda Hill, Toni Jacobs, and Becky Ommen, who is the only senior on the squad.

Although the team is very young, with 10 out of 13 players being either Freshmen or Sophomores, coach Catherine Schulte, a newcomer herself, doesn't see this as a hindrance.

"We may have to work a little harder together at first," said Coach Schulte, who previously coached volleyball and basketball for Benedictine College in Atchison, Kansas. "But the outlook for the future of the team is great."

Coach Schulte finds that it is often hard to recruit women who are interested in both an academically demanding curriculum and varsity basketball. For this reason, UMR is sometimes placed at a disadvantage against other schools with larger female enrollments and correspondingly larger women's sports budgets.

Despite this drawback, Coach Schulte feels good about the team. She said, "Overall I am very pleased with the talent of the players. The returning players really hustle. Laurie and Leslie Behm are very quick and Gail Halsey is especially good on defense, an area we need to work on. We are all looking forward to a challenging season and a chance to improve on last year's record."

The Miners will be able to work on that defense at a pre-season scrimmage against East Central Junior College in Union, on November 14. Looking ahead, the Lady Miners will face the School of the Ozarks in an away game on November 20, and Lincoln University at home, November 23. Then, on November 27-28, they will travel to St. Louis for the UMSL Invitational Tourney.

All home games begin at 7:30 and are free to students with an UMR I.D.

made progress."

McNally's efforts will soon turn to recruiting. He feels that with a good recruiting year added to the returning talent, 1982 should be a very successful season.

Kickers end year with 2-0 win

By LISA GALLAGHER

The 1981 Miner soccer season came to an end Saturday night when UMR defeated Northeast Missouri State, 2-0, here in Rolla.

The victory gave the Miners an 11-7-1 season and a 2-1 record in conference play.

Goals came from Pat Becker, who scored his 17th goal of the season, and Bob Zdvorak, scoring the first goal of his UMR career.

"We accomplished some good things this season," said Coach Paul McNally. "With a good nucleus returning and some victories this season over some very good teams, I feel like we

Riflers head for Ohio

By: JIM GRIM

The UMR Varsity Rifle Team will be departing from Rolla today to compete in its second and third matches of the season. The Miners will compete in a field of over 220 different teams in the 25th Annual Walsh International Rifle Match in Cincinnati, Ohio. The Walsh Match sponsored by the Xavier University Rifle Club is one of the largest indoor international rifle matches in the United States, with the level of competition being extremely high. The match is an NRA-registered full course smallbore match. In addition to the fierce competition between teams, individuals competing in the match have the opportunity to qualify for an invitation to the U.S. International World Team Tryouts to be held in Phoenix, Arizona, in May and June 1982.

After showing their metal in Cincinnati, the Miners will continue their road trip with a second match at the 17th Annual University of Kentucky Invitational Tournament in Lexington, Kentucky. Here the Miners will again face a large field of nationally-rated teams in a second full course NRA International Free Rifle match.

With four experienced shooters, this year promises to be one of the best seasons in many years for the Miner Rifle Team. Under the direction of Team Captain Steve Herzog, the scores of fellow team members Robin Thompson, Greg Hardy, and Frank Writz have slowly crept upward until the team average score is approaching last year's high season score, making the Miners a team to be reckoned with on any range.

Men's and Women's Intramural News

By LISA GALLAGHER

The semester has seen some exciting women's intramural action. Tennis opened the women's season with Carol Bornmann from Kappa Delta defeating WHA's Vickie Lappe for the single's title. Doubles action culminated in the team of Dena Porterfield and Sue Robbins from WHA winning over Lori Looser and Leslie Sonnabend of Chi Omega.

Chi Omega, last year's defending champions, fell 5 points short of a strong 60 point WHA finish in early October swimming competition. October also brought the completion of billiards play with GDI's Rhonda Canning beating out Tammy Sewell of TJHA for the title.

Results after billiards show WHA on top with a 13.5 point lead over TJHA in second place, followed by Kappa Delta, Zeta Tau Alpha and Chi Omega.

Intramural racquetball, which began September 29, is coming to a finish with four games left to play in each division. Double elimination tournaments will determine the winners next week.

Current action includes soccer, volleyball and table tennis, which are now well underway. These sports will wrap up the women's intramural fall schedule.

Following are the current women's intramural standings. The totals include points from tennis, swimming and billiards.

Unfortunately, repeated incidences of poor sportsmanship highlight the intramural news for this week. Not less than two fights have occurred on the intramural fields this year and several incidences of arguments involving players, spectators and referees have also taken place.

Students are urged to cooperate with the Intramural Managers Association and the referees in supporting proper sportsmanship both on the field and on the sidelines. The athletic department regrets the incidences that have occurred and reminds all students that unsportsmanlike conduct will not be tolerated.

Round robin play continues this week in intramural soccer and volleyball. Double elimination tournaments in singles and doubles table tennis got under way earlier this week and will conclude at the end of the semester.
